The Byrne Identity The Sensational Rugby Autobiography

Byrne started writing Sensational She-Hulk in 1989, after coming off a two year run on Superman at DC Comics. His run on the title was best known for having Jennifer constantly break the fourth wall, poking fun at the conventions of comics themselves. Byrne left the title after the first eight issues due to an editorial dispute.

Byrne Identity The The Sensational Rugby Autobiography

For a time, starting with the Sensational She-Hulk series by John Byrne in 1989, She-Hulk was portrayed with a form of "cross-dimensional" or metafictional awareness to break the fourth wall. In some stories, she showed an awareness of being a comic book character, with visuals of her "tearing the page" or "walking through a page of advertisements" to reach an enemy's control center.
