The "Diamond" formation and other multi-back "pistol" sets. Thursday, 08 September 2011 , by : Chris. I like to often say that football is a simple game, and in that vein coaches, when designing offensive plays, have really only two choices: To change where the players begin (the formation), and where they'll end up (the play design). Formations are often more important than plays, but also should be easier to get right: The guy should stand where he was told to stand.

1: Catch snap, turn and hand to the 2 back. It's important that the 1 gets the ball to the 2 in the backfield. This will give your 2 back time to adjust his path if needed. 2: Take handoff, cut off of the 4's kick-out block. 3: Fake to the left, replace pulling guard. 4: Kick-out defensive end.

Power out of the Diamond Formation | Pistol Diamond

Coaches are trying to figure out how to use it in their offenses. The Pistol Diamond creates unique running angles out of the backfield. You can run a stretch play with a lead blocker, or a downhill iso to the deep back - or the Quarterback! There's just a ton of options to this variation on the Inverted Wishbone.

4 Formations Your Offense Should Be Using

The Diamond formation is a physical formation. Your players will grow to love how they are able to physically punish the defense and move the ball down the field and the explosive plays that it can lead to in the passing game.

Using the Diamond Formation to Create Mismatches

3 BACK DIAMOND FORMATION. Diamonds Are Forever. The use of 3 backs in offensive formations has been around for over 100 years. Whether it be the T Formation, Power I, Maryland I, Wing T, Wishbone, or Flexbone offensive coaches have always tried to incorporate 3 backs as part of their base run game. With the development of the athletic QB that is a viable option in the run game, the Diamond Formation now gives the Offensive Coordinator 4 potential ball carriers.

Run Game: Bone Formation. Bone Formation. This offense is based on spread formations. Of the 13 primary formations, every one features a 1-or 2-back set with WRs stretching the field. Bone is a special 3-back diamond-style formation, with the 2 slot WRs lined up in the backfield with the F. Any play can be run out of Bone, but as a non-spread formation, it's unique enough to warrant two dedicated sections in the playbook (one run, one pass).

The Cloudy LB/Corner has two movements: chase the snag route or drop back into the fin route. At the snap of the ball the quarterback will open up, stick the ball backwards at the running back and look at the Read LB. If the Read LB drops back then he hands the ball off to the running back and then FAKES THE THROW.
