Jewelry in ancient Greece was viewed as a symbol of power, social status, ward against evil, celebration of the gods and was most often used by female members of wealthy class. Even though they received techniques for making gold items from the nearby kingdoms of Egypt and Mesopotamia around 3 thousand years ago, they managed to retain they unique style that was remain unchanged in the centuries that followed.

ANCIENT GREEK JEWELRY

A stunning example of an ancient Greek diadem. Source.. Just like the Egyptians and the Romans, the ancient Greeks too valued jewelry, but compared to the jewelry of civilizations like Egypt, which was astonishingly elaborate and rich, initially, Greek jewelry was quite understated, simple and inspired by nature.Over time, the designs grew to be more complex and included the use of different ...
