A type of junior debt on which the borrower (or issuer) pays no cash interest (or yield) until the principal amount is repaid (or redeemed). PIK debt can be structured in a variety of ways, including as a subordinated loan, a deep discount bond, loan notes or an issue of bonds in the public debt markets. Depending on how the PIK debt is structured, on each interest payment date the accrued interest is either added to the principal and is paid when the debt matures or is "paid" by the issue ...

How a PIK Loan Works With PIK loans, the borrower doesn't make any cash payments of principal or interest between the drawdown date and the maturation date. Usually calculated on a compounding schedule, paid-in-kind interest accrues and is either added to the principal balance of the loan or paid by the issuance of new securities.

Using Payment-in-Kind Financing to Grow Your Business

A PIK, or payment in kind, is a type of high-risk loan or bond that allows borrowers to pay interest with additional debt, rather than cash. That makes it an expensive, high-risk financing instrument since the size of the debt may increase quickly, leaving lenders with big losses if the borrower is unable to pay back the loan.
