Richard Florida's "The Flight of the Creative Class: The New Global Competition for Talent" is a thought-provoking book says Melih Arat. Florida discusses global competition, which was once a contest between countries, and now belongs to cities. In today's world cities are in competition in terms innovation and creativity.

The Flight of the Creative Class - Creative Class Group

In this follow up to his book "The Rise of the Creative Class" (which I haven't read), Florida makes the case that the creative class, those with creative talents in the arts, sciences, technology, business etc are mobile and countries and regions with environments that this creative class don't find comfortable and welcoming will lose them, and the economic growth they nurture, to greener pastures.

In The Flight of the Creative Class, Richard Florida argues that the United States has become less supportive of members of "the creative class": individuals who develop new processes, businesses, technologies, and art. The end result is that the U.S. attracts (or allows in because of Homeland Security concerns) fewer foreign graduate students, academics, and entrepreneurs, which in turn will drive down our competitiveness.

Review of Flight of the Creative Class

In the highly influential and best-selling book The Rise of the Creative Class, Dr. Richard Florida rightly points out that cities have for too long focused on the wrong economic development goals. City officials have tried to attract and retain Fortune 500 corporations, but the cost of courting big business, as you well know, is steep.
