Street photographer and nanny Vivian Maier was able, with her Rolleiflex, to capture the feeling and the people of 1950s-1970s NYC and Chicago. A complicated and difficult person who hoarded tens of thousands of images on film, she was nonetheless also able to reach people and get them to pose for her on city streets.

Vivian Maier: A Photographer Found by John Maloof

Vivian Dorothy Maier was an American street photographer whose work was discovered and recognized after her death. She worked for about 40 years as a nanny, mostly in Chicago's North Shore, while pursuing photography. She took more than 150,000 photographs during her lifetime, primarily of the people and architecture of Chicago, New York City, and Los Angeles, although she also traveled and photographed worldwide. During her lifetime, Maier's photographs were unknown and unpublished; many of her

Everything you've heard about Vivian Maier is probably true. The mysterious eccentric was a classic enigma in real life. But this enigma was also one of the very greatest street photographers of the 20th Century. It only took way too long to for the world to discover her, due in no small part to Maier's reluctance to seek recognition.
